Jamaica's Hansle Parchment was set to compete in the 110-metre hurdles at the Tokyo Olympic Games, only to arrive at the wrong venue with little time to spare. Tijana Stojkovic, a volunteer working at the games, jumped in to loan him the taxi money. Parchment made it on time to race and won gold – then set out to find the stranger who helped him. The hurdler posted a video to Instagram in which he revisited the area where Stojkovic had been working, spotted her again, and showed her his gold medal. Jamaican officials have extended Stojkovic an 'official invitation' to visit the island.
